

UP Open University • Faculty of Management and Development Studies MASTER OF INTERNATIONAL HEALTH

International health is a field focusing on public health across regional or national boundaries. It seeks to (a) understand health problems in a global context; (b) compare factors that affect the health of people in resource-poor and transitional economies around the world; and (c) develop means of disease reduction and health protection and promotion for these populations.

Program Goals

The program aims to develop international health professionals who are able to:

- Design health programs that address significant global health problems and issues (e.g. pandemics, industrial accidents, disasters, health effects of environmental change) that are informed by a critical understanding of the global political, economic, environmental, and cultural systems and how these relate to health and development;
- Implement services that work in a global context for health promotion and development in accordance with international and local policies, directions, and ethical standards.
- Evaluate health development programs and strategies across different settings, both local and international, whether rural or urban, especially in middle- and low-resource countries;
- Engage in effective collaboration with important international organizations as well as non government organizations for the improvement of health, taking into account the interplay of political, economic, environmental, and cultural factors in different development settings especially in middle- and low-resource countries; and
- Contribute to the continuously evolving discipline of international health through research generation.

Mode of Instruction

All courses are taught online following the principles of guided independent study and collaborative inquiry.
