

UP Open University • Faculty of Management and Development Studies MASTER OF NURSING EDUCATION

The Master in Nursing Education program is a 30-unit professional graduate program that prepares nurses to assume the roles of teacher, good clinician, and leader manager in higher education institutions. The program will be jointly offered by UP Manila (UPM) College of Nursing and UPOU Faculty of Management and Development Studies (FMDS) delivered in a combination of face-to-face and online modes.

With this program, nurse educators can perform different roles in higher education institutions. The roles contributed to the framing of the program outcomes. The educator role demonstrates varied skills in different educational contexts: curriculum development, clinical teaching and supervision, classroom teaching, laboratory and practicum teaching, application of knowledge of the learning process, and management of the learning environment. This role is supported by being a good clinician knowledgeable of the subject matter with the ability to communicate this knowledge to students. The roles also focus on skills related to professionalism, being a change agent, lifelong learning, collaboration, and communication, and the values essential for the full demonstration of the nurse educator role. Educating future nurses depends on the ability to interact and adjust to many diverse conditions and challenges, helping them to enact and enhance the best practices in teaching.

Program Goals

At the end of the program, graduates can:

1. Perform skills relevant to curriculum design, implementation, monitoring, evaluation, and management based on contemporary educational theories, principles, and models
2. Facilitate learning through the application of theoretical concepts among diverse learners with different learning needs and styles
3. Maintain advanced knowledge and skills in the theory and practice of nursing
4. Demonstrate professionalism and values in all responsibilities in the practice of nurse education.

Mode of Instruction

Courses are delivered on a semestral basis using various technologies where appropriate. The virtual classrooms run in MyPortal, the learning management system of the UPOU. This is where class announcements are made, course materials uploaded, discussions held and assignments uploaded.
